Sunday, September 19, 2010 - 2 pm - 4 pm

Women got the right to vote in Washington state in 1910. Seattle's Museum of History and Industry (MOHAI) will have an exhibit featuring the artifacts and history of the Women's Movement in Washington during the huge effort to get women the vote.

Seattle AAUW (American Association of University Women) will have a special program at the museum on Sunday, September 19th for $15 (students $10) featuring:

- Lecture by MOHAI staff with Q & A
- Docent led tour through the Women's Suffrage Exhibit
- Light refreshments and socializing

Less than 100 years ago, women weren't allowed to vote, but were required to pay taxes and abide by laws their male counterparts voted into place. Join us and find out how women from all economic and ethnic groups banded together to persuade the men of Washington to give them the right to vote.
